TRIPS &amp; DESTINATIONS

5 UNCOMMON BUT COOL TRAVEL DESTINATIONS

Do you love to travel but hate crowds? Maybe you'd love to visit somewhere like the Bahamas or Hawaii but don't want to deal with the foot traffic? Believe it or not, there are other places in the world that hold the same beauty as these popular travel destinations -- they're just not as well-known. We've compiled a list of our top 5 "secret" spots from around the world. After reading this, we hope you'll be inspired to take a leap of faith by trying something new. Let's take a trip around the world together.

5. Pai, Thailand

Pai takes the meaning of "small town" to a whole new level. This is one of the most scenic and quiet places to travel to, which makes it perfect for a relaxing but adventure-filled journey. In Pai you'll find striking places to hike that include waterfalls, cave systems, and a lush jungle. You'll also find canyons with hiking trails along the rims, which make for stunning views and a serene experience.

This area has so much to discover and there's always something to do. There are places to picnic, hike, and explore all over this northern Thailand town. It's the type of place you'll want to stay at for days or weeks at a time. We recommend this place for lovers of nature and exercise. Don't forget to pack your tennis shoes!

4. Borneo

For lovers of wildlife, there's nowhere we love more than Borneo. This is the third-largest island in the world, and it's split between three countries: Indonesia, Malaysia, and Brunei. Here you will find more wildlife than almost anywhere else. The wildlife population is seemingly larger than the human population.

If you follow the Kinabatangan river, you'll see hornbills, elephants, slow lorises, crocodiles, and even flat-headed cats. You'll be able to see these creatures closer than you could even imagine, and it makes for a truly unique and breathtaking experience. If you look closely, you'll even see the endangered Borneo orangutans and Sunda clouded leopards. Both of these species can only be found in Borneo.

3. Bregenz, Austria

If you want to "get away" while being close to some popular travel destinations, Bregenz is an ideal choice. This is a beautiful, alpine European town that sits on the edge of Lake Constance. It's only a short trek away from Germany, Switzerland, France, Italy, and Lichtenstein.

Using electric bikes and panoramic cable cars, you can explore this town in style. You can either choose to take short, scenic hiking trails or longer, more arduous lakeside paths. In the middle of town, the first thing you see is the Pfander. It's a large mountain covered in wildflowers that you can explore via the cable cars.

2. Tuscany, Italy

Are you interested in arts and culture? You may have heard of Tuscany. While this is one of the more well-known places on our list, there is no shortage of personal space here. You can spend weeks exploring Tuscany's iconic wine vineyards, intricate cathedrals, and the Piazza del Campo. Spend some time dining in the delicious restaurants and chatting with the locals -- they'll give you even more ideas as far as where you should go and what you should do.

Art is one of the largest attractions here, as the Renaissance movement got its start in Tuscany. You'll find museums filled to the brim with art from breathtaking masters. This is also the hub for fashion icons like Gucci. Expect to see some incredible styles and shop around for your favorites. Don't forget to hop over to Florence and visit the Duomo.

Are you a foodie? Tuscany is overflowing with dining establishments that only use farm-to-table recipes, bringing you some of the world's most delectable dishes.

1. Easter Island, South Pacific

Easter Island is for history buffs and lovers of mystery. While it's under the Jurisdiction of Chile, it's smack dab in the center of the South Pacific -- you can't usually get more remote than that. So again, if you're looking for a "secret spot" that isn't overflowing with people, this is a terrific choice. It's not just beautiful and relaxing -- it has a ton of shops and restaurants too. And best of all? It comes complete with its own mysterious storyline.

The Rapa Nui were the indigenous people of Easter Island, and they were secretive about their practices and traditions. When you look at the island, the first things you'll see are over 400 intricate rock sculptures, all sticking out of the ground at different angles and sizes. We're not 100% sure why the Rapa Nui did this, or what their message was. But if you travel here, you can try to crack the mystery on your own. The Father Sebastian Englert Anthropological Museum is located here, and it's filled with the rich history of the Rapa Nui. Can you crack the mystery?
